I have a simple question: Does a pawn with a bad position gain any advantage by leaving the position and moving onto a better one? Does the other side gain more in that case? A: Pawns may not be able to escape, but they can certainly get trapped. In this position the black king can take up a position on d3 or c4 that leaves the white king unable to reach either of them, forcing the white king to remain on c5, while the black king threatens both c4 and a3, making the white king's only safe position weak. A: Yes, White may still have a useful pawn-stuck position. A simple example is: [FEN "8/6P1/8/8/8/8/8/7K w - - 0 1"]
